giver's hand and danced with her around the room. These little knots were often messengers of pleasure and of hope—sometimes the contrary. Helen was led to the basket, she chose a knot, and, approaching the portion of the ring where Henrich stood, gave it to Herr Crick, who stood at his side.

Up to this moment the image of the maiden had lain like a bright daguerrectype upon his brain. A canker now attacked it, and the bliss of contemplating it was no more. He had sense enough to know that this was a subjective phenomenon, that the maiden had not changed, but had merely revealed to him the peril of the dream in which he had indulged. There was a steadiness and decision about her action which banished the thought that was the result of "She is right," he thought. "I have been a fool and a coxcomb, and now the penalty is come.'

A stroke of calamity is often accompanied by psychological results, the reverse of those which might be anticipated. It was so in the present Henrich mingled with his companions. None knew the nature of the change that had suddenly come upon him, and it surprised even himself. He did not quiver; he was as rigid as a rock. His brain became clear and his glance concentrated. He felt a sudden accession of intellectual power, enabling him, as it were, to crush in an instant problems which, under ordinary circumstances, he might have nibbled at for Nor was it the energy of despair which thus took possession of him; he never once con-templated the suicide. He confronted the fact of his position valiantly, and the swelling of his heart seemed only to exalt him into clearer day.

On the evening of the next day, Henrich and his friend Fred sat together in the room of the former, and carried on the dialogue with which we have introduced our narrative

(Conclusion in our next.)

WASHINGTON:

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, OCTOBER 10. Removal.

We shall to-day remove our printing office to 6th street, south of Pennsylvania avenue, where we shall hereafter possess the advantage of steam power for the propulsion of our doublecylinder Napier press. Our publication office will not be changed.

We must ask our readers to pardon any shortcomings in the present issue.

FIRES !- Last night was moonlight and pleasant, and the boys appeared ambitious for a frolic. Accordingly a bonfire was made in the Northern Liberties, and "the machines" got out; but this afforded only a little run, and no one was satisfied. More serious work was therefore necessary, and two stables in different parts of the city were burned down. The first, at half-past nine o'clock, was the stable of Messrs. Ager & McLean, near Thirteenth street and the canal, One of these gentlemen saved from destruction the two horses in the stable. The second was the stable of Messrs. W. J. Sibley & Co., near Fourteenth street and the canal. This was consumed, together with two Lorses and a quantity of lumber near.

After the benfire in the Northern Liberties. a hut occupied by a poor colored man, at the corner of 9th and M streets, was attacked and stoned by a number of boys, from 12 to 16 years of age, who cursed and swore like fiends incarnate in their spirit of pleasantry.

GREAT REDUCTION IN RAILROAD FARE !- UNteresting and gratifying to the traveling public were almost universally applicable: Ohio Railroad Company have reduced the fare on their road. This great reduction has been made with their accustomed spirit of liberality. Now, reader, how much do you suppose they have reduced the fare from Harper's Ferry to Baltimore? Why, in the enormous sum of forty-five cents?—just enough to lose that amount on each passenger, without being any inducement to persons to travel who are not compelled to do so. From Cumberland to Baltimore it is do so. From Cumberland to Baltimore it is $5, although 97 miles further! Why did the Company not make the reduction in proportion? We trust the citizens of Baltimore will cause the directors of the road to be exhibited at their Fair as specimens of liberatity! We will buy a sight .- Charlestown (Va.) Free Press.

While the fare to Cumberland is reduced two dollars, the through fare to Pittsburg, we are informed, is not reduced at all. Has the stage line over the fearful mountains added two dollars to its charge? It is not likely. The presumption is that the Railroad Company pockets that two still! It has the name of having repersons who go to Cumberhand pass on still some petty scheming in this?

We have heretofore urged the reduction of demand this reduction. Will they not?

Mr. Stuart.

The Wheeling Gazette recently contained a nomination of the Hon. A. H. H. STUART for the Vice Presidency; but in the last number received that paper says of Mr. Summers that he is the marr of the State, and that he is intellectually a head-and-shoulder taller than any man in it. If this be so, why do they send out Mr. Stuart as their great national man, and keep at home their great intellects. The information be gained in Massachusetts the other day would, according to his telling, be of great value at home, especially in view of the extension of the right of suffrage under the new constitution. Mr. Stuart is a very pleasant, genteel young man, and we are sure cannot be otherwise than agreeable anywhere, but especially where apparent elevation would not tend to make him giddy. Take him home, we beseech you, and send us one of your intellectually tall ones!

A few more Words about the World's Fair and its Effects.

There are certain propositions we may justly assume in relation to the intentions of those who originated the World's Fair. The person who figures most conspicuously from the weight of his position in getting it up, although not technically, is virtually a royal personage. His technical position is that of prince; in effect his position, in some things, must be royal. And he appears to understand pretty clearly the metes and bounds within which he can efficiently move, where it would be perilous to throw himself athwart the way of the ministry, and where he may with safety encounter their repugnance. The persons with whom he consults are, doubtless, earnestly attached to royalty, and believe that monarchy is the greatest good in government that can bless the human race; but they may be so far liberal as to restrict this idea to constitutional monarchy, such as that of Great Britain. Indeed, this is the hean ideal of excellence in human government. in the judgment of the majority of the monarchists of Great Britain. Many of the tories are as downright aristocrats as Metternich or Schwartzenburg, or the present impious and perfidious emperor of Austria. They are your physical-force men, by way of eminence. The Caligulas, and Neros, and Tiberiases, are far preferable in their view to a democracy of any

However amiable Prince Albert may be, it would be according him transcendant merit to suppose without transcendant evidence that he believed any country of the globe to be capable of successful competition with Great Britain, even in the utilitarian arts. And in general, it is evident from the well-known facts attending the entrance of the Americans on the arena-the exultation at our anticipated defeat, and the coldness and silence of the French journals-that none of them had admitted to their own minds the probability of American success against the austere and complacent Englishman, "stuck o'er with titles and hung round with strings"-or the polished and bowing victories and oblivious of his defeats—or the proceeds in explanation: proud Spaniard who remembers only that he expelled the Moors from Spain, but was, with numerous physical advantages to keep his ground, himself expelled from North and South America generally.

But when the Americans in this great mental and mechanical strife were not beaten-when Great Britain, justly famous for her agricultution of grain, and particularly wheat, produced ginia reaping machine-when Russia and France, those military powers that have disturbed all the continent of Europe and part of that of Asia with their wars, brought forward for exhibition nothing in military weapons comconnecticut,—a revulsion of feeling and opin- It says of General Scott: ion must have ensued among all the reflecting individuals of those countries, which an amateur of human passions might feel a curiosity to examine. We would say with him most cordially, "let us maintain peace and good will amongst each other, for we believe it is the interest of all to maintain peace;" but the passions of men assuredly for the most part have been and still are predominant over an enlightened view of their interest. It is no man's real interest to commit a crime, but how many do we see who yield to temptation, lie, steal, defraud, are life, revengeful, extravagant, &c., when an enlightened view of their interest must emphatically teach them that they are acting in contravention to its dictates. We have gained respect by the exhibition All intellectual men must see the false estimate that calumnious monarchical journals, teeming with falsehoods and misrepresentations, have caused to be put upon our mechanical and mental position. Good and wise men from different countries met at the World's Fair, and communed with each other of the things that belong to the peace of nations, and tacitly or formally agreed that they would sincerely, by inculcating and observing the great principles of Christian ethics, preserve, as far as it was possible for them to do so, the peace of the world. But other spirits met there; the Russian met his brother conspirators with the blood of Hungary and Circassia, which, like that of Abel, cries from the ground against the murdererthe licentious and cruel Austrian, dyed in the gore of Hungary and of Italy-the vainglorious Frenchman, dazzled with the name of an unprincipled and sanguinary conqueror, his hands all reeking with the blood of patrio's and martyrs who have resuscitated the valor of old Rome, and gained a name, if, for a time, the y have lost the visiting Washington on the 16th of November, battle. Doubtless there is a glorious and peaceful future in reserve for mankind, but liberty she must prepare by mercy, by patience, by kindness, by vigilance, by vigor, by the punof God.

The Presidency-A Whig Candidate. The Republic of this morning quotes with commendation, from the New York Courier and Enquirer, a powerful article in support of the claims of Mr. Webster, and the chances of his election, and says:

and eminent public services of this gentleman, and his hold upon the affections of the Whig party, it is impossible to use language of exag-geration. We believe that he commands the attachment of the American people, beyond and above all party considerations, and that there are hundreds and thousands of Democrats who coran—went to New York and succeeded in would so far swerve from party allegiance as to give their votes for Mr. Webster, which they would withhold from any other Whig nominee."

If this be so, there is a possibility of his election, and he had better, by all means, be run. But in the next succeeding paragraph, the Republic seems to extinguish this fine prospect by saying that the discussion respecting men should be so conducted in the party that

It is matter of secondary only that he is a suitable type and symbol of the Whiy policy and Whiy principles. Personal preferences and partialities—local predilections and antipathies—must be waved and forgotten. They are nothing, compared with the triumph of the cause. The great question is, in what sign shall we conquer?"

Of course the hundreds and thousands o Democrats who would vote for Mr. Webster could not be hoped for in a strictly party contest of this sort, and he would thus in a mea-Frenchman, full of recollections of Napoleon's sure be shorn of his strength. The Republic

Acceptability to the Whige North and South has been frequently claimed for Mr. Fillmore, and we think the side blows given to Mr. Webster and General Scott indicate that it is not accorded to them! The Republic is cunning!

They would not be less ardent. He is not within their list of choosing; but if the Whigs should rally on him, they can bear it, and even be ardent in his support! Sic transit gloria mundi! .

The Journey to New Buda!

Our readers will remember that, a few weeks ago, 128 Hungarians, through the medium of the earth with peaceful purposes and contrite their delegates, addressed themselves to Major hearts, abjuring their errors and crimes, and Mrs. Tochman, (being specially directed by their delegates, addressed themselves to Major Kossuth to do so,) to advise with them about the means of reaching New Buda, a colony which was founded last year by Gov. Ujhazy, must have one grand struggle more, and for that in Decatur county, Iowa. Their application was laid by Major and Mrs. Tochman before the President and some members of the Cabiishment of evil-doers, by the praise of them net, who, (especially Hon. Thomas Corwin,) that do well, by ruling among men in the fear brought it to the notice of W. W. Corcoran esq. This last-named gentleman then offered and deposited $1,700 in the hands of the Mayor of New York, for the purpose of paying the passage of those Hungarians from New York to New Buda, with an express direction that, should a free passage be obtained from the directors of railroads and steamboats, the money so deposited by Mr. Corcoran was "In speaking of the commanding abilities to be employed for the purpose of purchasing agricultural implements and provisions for the coming winter, for such Hungarians as would go to settle in New Buda. Loder, President of the Erie Railroad Company [Translated from the French.] DUNKIRK, October 7, 1851.

To Major Tochman: Sir: I have the honor of informing you that we all reached Dunkirk yesterday evening. Today, early in the morning, we visited the Mayor of the town, Mr. Brown. He received us very well, and, upon learning the purport of ou journey West, formed immediately a Protective Committee, of which the following gentlemen are members: Mr. Brown, Mr. Risley, director of the Railroad to Buffalo, Dr. R. G. Haughey proprietor of the house "Loder." These generous gentlemen lodged us in the best hotel in the town, and furnished to us all that was necessary to make our sojourn here as comfortable as could be done: they also promised us to make collections in order to increase our fund for the purchase of agricultural implements and provisions. We do not know at this moment what will be the result of their undertaking in this regard; but whatever it may be, we feel under great obligation for the generous and hospitable reception which has been extended to us in this town. It surpasses our expectations, and proves that we are here amongst true friends, who know how to feel and sympathize with the victims of tyranny. We sought long such friendly reception. It is a treasure of hu-manity, the only effective consolation which ssures us that we are amongst true protectors of the unfortunate and persecuted. We will leave the hearth of these generous citizens of liberty with tears in our eyes.

We depart from this place to-morrow, at 11 o'clock, a. m., for Detroit, and carry with us a better hope to find in our farther journey true friends. We feel already our sufferings greatly allayed; we feel as if we were rewarded for our sacrifices and sufferings by the generous treat-ment which has been extended to us.

Please, sir, to accept the assurance of our high respect, and of our gratitude; and be so good as to assure of them, on our benau, Madame Tochman, your lady. I and all my companions of misfortune will not cease to remember them until our last days.

Your very devoted friend and servant,

BETTER THAN GOLD!

PORTSMOUTH, July 9, 1851.

MR. J. E. BOUSH—Dear Sir: I feel it a duty to make known the benefit I have derived from Dr. Hampton's VEGETABLE TINCTURE. For a number of years 1 suffered from disease, but to a greater degree for the last three years. One of the forms of my disease was dyspep-sia. From this dreadful malady I suffered to such an exsuffered from disease, but to a greater degree for the last three years. One of the forms of my disease was dyspepsia. From this dreadful malady I suffered to such an extent that life was really a burden. The attack of it on me was different to that on any other person of whom I have heard; at times it was like the palpitation of the heart; there was a constant thumping and beating without intermission about the region of my heart, chest, and stomach; some of the attacks would last for weeks; my stomach was much distended, with constant pain, great weakness, and constination of the bowels. I could not eat the most simple food without pain. I also suffered greatly from disease of the kidneys, with constant pain in the back, that I could walk only with great difficulty. I tried nearly all of the most celebrated patent medicines of the day, but found no relief. I had also the best medical attendance. One of my physicians frankly told me it was of no use for me to be paying him for advice, as he could do me no good. I gave up almost in despair, and thought my disease certainly incurable.

At this juncture I heard of Hampton's Vegetable Tincture. I refused to give it a trial, although persuaded by my friends, until my son purchased a few bottles, and requested me to try it; after taking it a few times, it had a most happy effect on me; my confidence increased, and after taking three bottles, my dyspepsia, or disease of the stomach, was nearly if not entirely cured. I now feel myself a new man, and in botter health than for years. I am certain the cure in my case was made by this Hampton's Vegetable Tincture alone. Since my cure I have recommended the tincture to a number of my friends, who have also been relieved by it. Some of the cures have been as rapid and equally wonderful as mine.

I present my respects to Messas Mortimer & Mowbray, the proprietors of this valuable medicine, and say to them its valua is above price; and from: my cure, and what I have seen of its effects on others, I shall ever feel it my duty
